Celsius:

Additional Simulator Order to Swedish Air Force

The Celsius business unit CelsiusTech Systems has received an order from the Swedish Defence Materiel Administration (FMV) for the further development of Strics, a simulator used for training operators in the Swedish air defence combat control system. The order is worth approximately MSEK 35.

The result of this project is very important for the royal Swedish Air Force's and Swedish Defence Materiel Administration's continued training and verification activities in the area of combat control.
