

For immediate release:

Airservices Australia and European Aeronautical Group sign dealership agreement.

Airservices Australia and European Aeronautical Group – EAG – 6 October signed a Navdata dealership agreement. Through this agreement, Airservices Australia will market and sell EAG's Navdata products to customers in Australasia and the Far East.

Airservices Australia's Chief Executive Officer, Mr Greg Russell, said the dealership agreement was further evidence of the organisation's commitment to providing the aviation industry with the best products available.

"Through better access to EAG's Navdata products, the Australian and Asian aviation industries can continue to enhance the safety and efficiency of their operations", Mr Russell said.

Says Gunnar Öhrn, EAG's VP Sales and Marketing: "This is a major step forward for EAG. Through the dealership agreement with Airservices Australia we will reach a market where we have had limited sales and marketing coverage for our Navdata product range."

European Aeronautical Group is a leader in the development and production of aeronautical products and services. Headquartered in Stockholm, Sweden, with a fully owned subsidiary in London, UK, European Aeronautical Group offers a complete aeronautical product portfolio:

- Electronic and paper charts and route documentation.
- Flight planning system and applications.
- Performance applications.
- Navdata/FMS data and databases.
- Electronic Flight Bag solutions.

EAG's electronic Route Manual, eRM®, is the only product of its kind which has been approved for navigation without paper backup. Last summer, eRM was followed by eAerad, an electronic version of the well-known Aerad charts and with British Airways as launch customer.

For further details, please contact:

EAG: Gunnar Öhrn, VP Sales and Marketing at gunnar.ohrn@euronautical.com or +44 1932 704208