

Press Release December 1, 2000

Gunnebo appoints new information director

Janerik Dimming has been appointed as Information Director at the Gunnebo Group. He comes from the IT company Adera, where he has been VP and head of information since the beginning of 2000. Prior to this his positions included twelve years as Information Manager at SKF Sveriga AB.

Dimming will join Gunnebo's management group, where his main task will be to significantly strengthen Gunnebo's image among its most important targets groups in Sweden and abroad.

- Janerik Dimming is a highly qualified and experienced person with an impressive track record from numerous companies. With his experience as information manager with a large international group, coupled with recent experience from the fast growing IT industry, he will be eminently suitable for our Group, comments Bjarne Holmqvist, Gunnebo's President and CEO.
- It will be very exciting to start working for an international group of companies that has been radically transformed in recent years from a traditional engineering enterprise into a group that is a world leader in the security industry, adds Dimming. I also expect that my experience from SKF and as a consultant, not to mention a variety of positions in the information field in the private, state and local government sectors will be useful to Gunnebo.

Janerik Dimming will take up his position as Information Director at Gunnebo successively starting on January 1, 2001. Initially he will operate out of the head office in Göteborg, Sweden, and from bases on Gunnebo's most important markets in Europe.
