Saab and Systematic sign cooperation agreement

Defence and security company Saab and Systematic has signed a non-exclusive cooperation agreement within the high echelon Command, Control and Information System (CCIS) market segment.

“By combining our complementary offers, market channels and integration capabilities we have taken an important step together to strengthen the Nordic industry competitiveness,” said Gunilla Fransson, Head of Business Area Security and Defence Solutions, Saab.

“Working together is a fantastic opportunity for both companies,” said Michael Holm, President and CEO of Systematic. “We at Systematic are looking forward to sharing our complimentary technologies and know-how so that we can offer customers fully combined products and integrated systems.”

Both Saab and Systematic have value adding technology to offer each other as well as present and future customers. The non-exclusive agreement gives Saab and Systematic easy access to each other’s competencies and products, which in an efficient manner can be integrated to meet customer needs.

Both companies are at the front line of developing interoperable Command and Control capability. The coming together will further contribute to collaboration and information sharing to the benefit of customers.

Saab provides world-leading solutions for situation awareness, decision support, efficient operation and training. Focusing on systems integration, Saab combines existing systems with its own products and those of partner companies.

In the CCIS segment Systematic have over 25 years of success and experience in delivering international, standardised off-the-shelf software.
