Saab Training Systems acquires rights to Gizmo3D

Saab Training Systems, Huskvarna, Sweden, has acquired the sales and development rights from ToolTech Software for Gizmo3D, a tool for three-dimensional presentation and interaction in fields such as computer games and military simulation.

Over the past five years, ToolTech Software has developed Gizmo3D into one of the leading products in the market for 3D-presentation. Several market leading international companies currently use Gizmo3D in simulation and visualization. Gizmo3D is also used in Saab Training Systems' products for military training.

Important success factors for Gizmo3D include continuously improving the product and providing outstanding customer support. Saab Training Systems has the necessary resources to meet these needs. The company will focus on the continued development of Gizmo3D as well as on broadening its offer with additional applications development tools.

Saab is one of the world's leading high-technology companies, with its main operations focusing on defence, aviation and space. The group covers a broad spectrum of competence and capabilities in systems integration.
