

Thomas Eggar looks to the future with Business Southampton

Law firm sponsors Future Southampton conference and offers the latest commercial and technology industry advice for growing local businesses

Thomas Eggar LLP, a leading Southern law firm, has confirmed they are the main sponsor of this year's Business Southampton Conference on 16th March.

The conference proved a natural fit with Thomas Eggar LLP as a leading provider of commercial legal services in the region, as it has a forward thinking approach with a theme of Future Southampton and a keynote speech to be delivered by UK Business Ambassador Lord Digby Jones Kt.

Speaking about the sponsorship, Caroline Armitage, partner at the firm stated:

"Thomas Eggar is delighted to be the main sponsor of this year's annual Business Southampton conference. As a major regional financial hub, and a gateway to the world through its world class port facilities we see the Southampton City region as a key growth area for the 21st century.

The conference themes include discussion of a planned renaissance of the city and with a growing Southampton office servicing business clients and the region's individual wealth creators, Thomas Eggar LLP were keen to get involved in the event. The conference will also include a discussion of the opportunities surrounding digital advances, which fits well with the launch of a new technology bulletin last month by Thomas Eggar LLP. The bulletin addresses key issues and challenges facing the numerous technology companies in the region, and also has wider interest for all local growing businesses who utilise a range of technologies to remain competitive in the current market.

Their involvement with the Business Southampton Annual Conference will allow Thomas Eggar LLP to further engage with the local business community and provide their expertise and knowledge to support commercial growth across the region.
