Press release 15 May 2001

VIOMA and GT Software in a technology agreement

VIOMA, the Swedish content management software company, and the US company GT Software, Atlanta, GA, have made a technology agreement. GT Software, a leading provider of data integration and Web-enabling solutions, offers both e-business and back office applications.

The combined effect, for the worldwide market, in business and market potential is worth approximately $ 15 million.

The technology agreement states that VIOMA will provide GT Software with content management technology based on VIOMA's flagship VIOMA Content Manager.

- "The combination of VIOMA's Content Manager and GT Software's products, tcAccess and Novation, is a strong offer to the market where customers can combine data integration application and content management for information structure solutions. This is a great example of integration of standard products for new business solutions." says Tomas Hallberg, President VIOMA.
- Joe Ganem, President of GT Software says, "The combination of GT Software's legacy integration technology combined with VIOMA's content management solutions provides the most comprehensive and scalable e-business solutions available for enterprise wide deployment. We now have the products to provide evolutionary paths between a company's back-office and front-office needs. The beauty of this is that it also provides for the most pressing needs of B2B and B2C issues while facilitating new business models and technologies".
