Sweden-based IT company op5 is growing rapidly and has a clear strategy to establish a presence - either via subsidiaries or retail partnerships - in several countries outside Scandinavia. op5 has now established a partnership with the leading Hungarian IT company Albacomp, according to which Albacomp will sell and install all op5's products in Hungary.

There has already been one installation in Hungary at a company in the financial sector - op5's first Hungarian customer. There are several outstanding quotations in the Hungarian market and additional Hungarian customers are expected to follow shortly.

Albacomp Zrt is a leading player in the IT market in Hungary. The company, located at Székesfehérvár, 60 km west of Budapest, employs 440 people with annual revenues of HUF 14.8 billion. Apart from operating Hungary's largest PC and notebook assembly plant, Albacomp is well known for its major network and system integration projects. Albacomp has played a significant role as an integrated IT solutions provider to local governments that are in the process of setting up their local e-government services.

"We are happy to announce a promising partnership which will make our products more accessible in Hungary. Software based on open source is a world-wide phenomenon and is continuously gaining ground from existing solutions like Tivoli, HP OpenView and BMC. The benefits are well-known: superior quality software, flexible solutions and very low costs", said Johan Berg, CEO, op5.
