Microsoft® appoints Prevas as its Gold partner for the computer products of the future in Scandinavia

Prevas, the only systems integrator in Scandinavia, has been appointed Windows Embedded™ Gold partner by Microsoft Corp. This appointment gives Prevas new opportunities to establish customer contacts and realise product ideas in which embedded computers play an important part.

Nowadays, small computers are incorporated into everything from cameras and mobile phones to industrial robots, defence systems and medical equipment. It is a rapidly growing market.

An important part of an embedded system is the operating system; it must provide a stable software platform.

“We are delighted to name Prevas as one of our Windows Embedded Gold Partners,” said Jane Gilson, Group Product Manager, Microsoft Corp. “Prevas has shown unique expertise in systems integration and product development around Windows CE solutions in the Nordic markets, and has contributed significantly to strengthening our combined success in the development of scalable, reliable and cost-effective embedded solutions for vertical markets in this region.”

With this collaboration, Prevas further strengthens its position as a developer of intelligence in products and industrial systems, which it has been working on since it was established in 1985.

“We are very pleased that Microsoft has chosen us as a Gold Level Member,” says Anders Englund, CEO at Prevas. “The market surrounding embedded systems has huge growth potential. Together with Microsoft, Prevas can now offer the market spearhead expertise in embedded systems that cannot be found anywhere in Scandinavia.

Note: The status that Prevas has been awarded by Microsoft is known as “Gold Level Member partner for Windows Embedded”. Microsoft has chosen to work with a single system integrator partner in Scandinavia. You can read more about Windows Embedded at www.prevas.se and www.microsoft.com/windows/embedded.
