MoCoHub provides multiplayer mobile games based on Terraplay

Stockholm March 10, 2005

The leading Polish content provider company MoCoHub offer multiplayer mobile games based on the Terraplay gaming solution, to their operator and publisher partners.

MoCoHub the leading mobile content provider in Poland with a network of international game service providers and publishers adds multiplayer mobile games based on Terraplay's network technology, Terraplay MOVE, to their broad portfolio of mobile content. The first customer to offer multiplayer mobile games to their users from the MoCoHub's games portal is Polkomtel SA, Poland's leading operator of digital cellular telephony network, with more than seven million subscribers. The first available game is "No Refuge" from developer Mobile Interaction Stockholm and more games will be added shortly.

The Terraplay solution is supported by a growing number of leading developers and publishers, and is in commercial service in a rapidly increasing number of mobile networks in Europe, Asia Pacific and the Americas.

"To offer multiplayer mobile games is completely in line with our vision to become the leading content hub in Poland. We strongly believe that this kind of mobile entertainment provided by Terraplay is one of the most attractive and highly demanded content available on the market today. All real time applications regardless of type requires a reliable and effective solution and that is also exactly what Terraplay provides", says Piotr Gruszecki, CEO at MoCoHub

"We are excited to provide the leading content hub in Poland with rich interactive multiplayer games. This is also great news for all the developers that are supporting our technology since it opens up new possibilities for them to launch their games both on a completely new market and also leveraging on MoCoHub's global partner network ,", says Sven Hålling CEO of Terraplay Systems AB.
