Finnair takes charts and route documentation from European Aeronautical Group.

In connection with their move towards a less paper flight-deck environment, Finnair 18 March signed a five years' agreement for EAG's Route Manual and eRM® electronic charts.

Hannes Bjurström, Finnair's SVP Flight Operations commented on the occasion: "In the end it was all about confidence; our confidence in EAG as provider and in eRM as a product. The fact that eRM has already received the first Civil Aviation Authorities' approval for navigation without paper back-up was another deciding factor".

Björn Alegren, President and CEO for European Aeronautical Group says: "My whole organisation and I are very proud of now having Finnair as customer to two of our products: the Route Manual and our Airport Obstacle Database".

European Aeronautical Group is headquartered in Stockholm with a subsidiary in London. EAG offers a complete aeronautical portfolio with,

- Route Documentation. The Route Manual, eRM, and Aerad. eAerad, a development based on the eRM platform is scheduled to be released at a customer seminar in London 23 and 24 May.
- Flight Planning applications.
- Performance applications, with a new weight and balance application to be released this spring.
- FMS databases for all major FMC systems.
