Gunnebo Entrance Control books orders for New Delhi Metro, Singapore and Taipei Metro worth some MEUR 3.3

Gunnebo Entrance Control, in association with Thales, the French company that is world market leader in automatic fare collection integration, has booked orders to supply entrance control systems and related equipment to Taipei Metro in Taiwan, Marina Line in Singapore and New Delhi Metro in India.

The total order value amounts to some MEUR 3.3 and it is expected that the systems will be delivered between 2005 and 2007.

“For several years we have concentrating on developing our products within the metro segment (underground city railways) and building up a global market organisation, which have been key factors enabling us to win these orders. Our development within the metro segment has been innovative and successful, and we are now one of the leading companies within this fast growing market segment,” says Lars Proos, President of Gunnebo Entrance Control.

Gunnebo Entrance Control also offers the market’s most extensive range of products within the field of entrance control for offices, airports and ports as well as sports stadiums and leisure centres.
