Forbes Selects Framfab as One of the Worlds 300 Best Companies.

Stockholm October 25, 1999 ---- In Forbes November issue Framtidsfabriken AB together with 300 other small publicly quoted companies is selected as one of the best companies in the world.

"Take a close look at the world's best small companies, 300 of them. If we're right in our selection, they won't be on the list for much longer because they'll be a lot bigger. As the world economy changes, these are the firms that will be among the chief beneficiaries of the transformation, because they're fast on their feet." Reads Forbes cover story for November 1, 1999

"It's interesting that Forbes highlights being fast as one of the main competitive advantages in the network economy. Framfabs positioning towards mobile and broadband Internet services is all about turning Scandinavia's technological head start into world class services", says Jonas Birgersson, CEO Framfab.

"It's important to remember that being faster is the only way Swedish companies can compete internationally, which mobile phones have shown. Broadband services will open up even larger commercial potential", concludes Jonas Birgersson.
