Bengt Levin appointed vice president of Cybercom Group

Cybercom Group's board decided to appoint Bengt Levin as the company's vice president.

"Cybercom is in an intensive growth phase on an international market," says Gert Schyborger, Cybercom Group board chairman. "Executive management will require extensive effort, and I'm convinced that Bengt Levin and Mats Alders, president and CEO, will be a strong team."

Levin joined Cybercom in 2000 as division manager for the telecom operation. During the past year, he managed two Cybercom divisions: Sweden and International. He was born in 1955 and holds an M.Sc.

"Cybercom is experiencing exciting times on a flourishing market," says Levin. "Some very interesting years are ahead of us. And I'm looking forward to working with the company's growth strategy."

"As we stated in our H1 report, the market outlook for Cybercom's services within telecom and selected technologies is excellent," says Alders. "Now we must grow – organically and through acquisitions – and we must strengthen our international presence. I'm delighted that Bengt was appointed to this position."
