Pointsec signs contract with Japanese partner

Total license revenue SEK 9.4 million

Stockholm, SWEDEN – March 30, 2006 – Pointsec Mobile Technologies, the global leader and the provider of the de facto standard for enterprise security software for laptop and desktop PCs, PDAs and smartphones, today announced a contract with a Japanese partner. Pointsec will provide its Pointsec endpoint security solution. The total license sales from this order amounts to SEK 9.4 million, which will be recognized as revenue during the first quarter of 2006.

Pointsec's mobile device encryption software ensures that all or selected parts of a mobile device's data can be encrypted in real time and can only be accessed by an authenticated user. Pointsec has become the most widely deployed data protection solution because it offers:

- Strong security with more and higher certifications than any competitive solution
- Guaranteed deployment due to innovative central management
- Widest coverage of mobile platforms including Windows and Linux desktop and notebook PCs, Symbian-, Microsoft-, and Palm- based smartphones and PDAs, as well as removable storage devices such as USB drives and CDs

Pointsec has been instrumental in helping businesses better understand the threats to their mobile data. It has published numerous reports demonstrating the importance of protecting information stored on mobile devices including a widely cited international survey of equipment lost in taxis and a forensic analysis of residual data on hard drives purchased on eBay.
