Game Developer Southend, subsidiary of Tactel, grows above trend

Global Southend Productions, the Malmö based games developer acquired by Tactel in 2005, is continuing its expansion following the refocus of the business on mobile game and entertainment development, even faster than other parts of the Tactel mobile software engineering services. Since the acquisition by Tactel, Southend has grown its number of professional game developers by 340%, while the total number of employees at Tactel has grown by 80 %.

- We are very pleased with the development of Southend since our acquisition, says Per Henriksson CEO at Tactel. Their competence in engineering of mobile as well as PC and Console based entertainment fits well with our strategy to deliver end-to-end solutions for the converged network.

Over the past years Tactel has developed into a significant provider of software engineering services all three major player types in the network world; handset manufacturers, network operators and content providers. The company today employs 170 professionals in its offices in Malmö, Lund and Huskvarna, Sweden.

About Tactel

Tactel is a leading software engineering firm of mobile applications, providing solutions and consulting services to many of the world's major network operators, content service providers and mobile handset vendors. We help these customers stay ahead of the game by designing genuinely original applications, and making sure they work on all networks and with all handsets.
