

MediTeam launches Internet services for universities and dentists

MediTeam has recently launched a number of new Internet services. Its home page, www.mediteam.com, gives dentists an easy way to obtain training in Carisolv[®], while lecturers at schools of dentistry can collect material for teaching their students about Carisolv[™].

The intention behind the new home page is to make it easier for dentists and university teachers and researchers to obtain information about Carisolv[™] and the continuing development of the method.

The most important innovations for dentists are the training module, Introduction course, literature about Carisolv[™] and the international customer newsletter, MediTeam Times. The new home page makes it simple for dentists to learn about the clinical application of Carisolv[™].

The participation of the universities, through the training of dental students in the use of Carisolv[™], has a long-term significance. MediTeam supports the schools of dentistry through a variety of service functions and its home page has now also introduced course literature for students. Lecturers who run student courses can download this literature free of charge, in the form of a compendium. The company considers that this university compendium will facilitate the teaching of students and thus also the continuing penetration of the international universities.

The training module, course literature and information materials will also be issued on a CD.

In the next few days a special home page, www.carisolv.com, will be launched, its intention being to make it easier for patients to learn about the potential of Carisolv[™].
