

EUROPOLITAN

PRESS RELEASE - Karlskrona 17 October 2000

Europolitan to supply wireless office to Tetra Pak

One of the world's leading suppliers of packaging and processing equipment to the food industry, Tetra Pak, has bought Europolitan's Wireless Office service. Tetra Pak employees no longer have fixed telephones since they now only use mobile phones.

If you call a Tetra Pak employee, you only pay for a regular call even though you are in fact ringing a mobile phone. If you call the Wireless Office, you will notice no difference from a normal telephony system. The main difference for Tetra Pak employees is that they are mobile at all times, increasing their accessibility, reachability and efficiency regardless of where they happen to be.

"We have previously enjoyed an excellent collaboration with Europolitan," says Nils-Åke Stålring, Manager of Tele and Data Communication at Tetra Pak in Lund. "We really like their tailor-made solutions and flexible working methods, which is why we chose their Wireless Office for our employees."

"Tetra Pak is one of our leading corporate clients and it goes without saying that we are delighted they opted for our solution. We are sure that Tetra Pak will save both time and money, as well as improve its employees' accessibility," says Mats Persson, who works in corporate sales at Europolitan.

Europolitan's wireless office now boasts almost 15,000 users.
