HiQ signs general agreement with Teligent

IT and management consultancy HiQ is signing a general agreement with international telecoms and service provider Teligent. The agreement relates to consultancy services within systems development, project management and management.

The new agreement between HiQ and Teligent covers various initiatives within technical development and management services.

“Like HiQ, Teligent is a fast-growing, entrepreneurial company operating in the telecoms industry, which makes it an attractive collaborative partner for HiQ,” says Patrik Boman, Managing Director HiQ Data. “We are very proud to work with customers like Teligent, which fuel developments at the very cutting edge of technology.”

One assignment for HiQ relates to Teligent’s new Enterprise initiative, which revolves around new systems for companies and organisations that enhance the efficiency of telecoms infrastructure. HiQ has also designed a test simulator for the new systems.

“HiQ works on a broad front within the field of telecoms, with suppliers, operators and end-users alike. This provides HiQ with a great understanding of developments, which benefits us as partners,” says Krister Skålberg, CEO and President of Teligent.

“Teligent provides platforms for added value services for network operators within fixed telephony, mobile telephony and the Internet as well as advanced telecoms solutions for large companies and organisations. Examples of services include Unified Messaging, virtual call centres, alternative payment solutions, number portability and virtual private networks,” continues Skålberg.

“We view Teligent as an exciting collaborative partner. Furthermore the company works with international initiatives, which is well in line with our ambition to follow our customers as they expand globally,” says Lars Stugemo, CEO HiQ.
