Aspiro sells mobile Internet applications to major European GSM operator

Aspiro announces that it is to deliver mobile Internet applications to a major European mobile operator over a three-year period. The order is valued at 400,000 euros. Aspiro will host most of the services at its operations center in Sweden.

Aspiro has signed an agreement with a major European mobile operator for the delivery of mobile Internet applications. The agreement, which runs over three years, involves seven mobile Internet services. The order value of the sales is estimated to 400,000 euros. The European GSM operator plans to have its mobile Internet applications in operation before the end of the year.

The mobile Internet applications and their content will be built into the European GSM operator's mobile portal. Aspiro will host the applications at its operations center in Karlskrona, Sweden.

"There is a big international demand for Aspiro's extensive portfolio of mobile applications and services," says Lena Wittbjer, Aspiro's CEO. "Aspiro has now received a number of large orders for its mobile Internet applications and we are currently negotiating with other international mobile operators regarding additional sales. We hope shortly to be able to announce similar agreements."
