Flextronics Manage Business-Critical Documentation with Excosoftware Content Manager

Kista, Sweden - November 23, 2000 – Excosoftware AB, a leading provider of content management solutions, today announced that Excosoftware Content Manager is central to the day-to-day operations within Flextronics Western Europe. Excosoftware Content Manager enables Flextronics business units to simply and cost-effectively produce and publish and share information throughout the Flextronics organization via the Internet. The document management system can handle vast amounts of unstructured information with support for creation, administration, storage, publishing and workflow. The result for Flextronics is a reduction in the total cost of ownership for business process information.

“Excosoftware Content Manager enables us to efficiently create, review and publish business process information,” said Mikael Keinonen, IT/IS Demand Manager for Flextronics Western Europe. “It also provides us with a platform for the administration of workflows. We view Excosoftware Content Manager as key to enabling us to meet our business goals.”

Flextronics evaluated a number of different document management systems before placing an order worth 5 Million Swedish Kronor for Excosoftware Content Manager. The company chose Excosoftware Content Manager because of the ease with which it could be integrated with their existing Microsoft-based infrastructure. The company were also attracted to the system’s scalability and flexibility. Currently being implemented at the company’s main site within Sweden, it is anticipated that the system could be extended to all Flextronics Western Europe locations.
