

HIQ SHARES THE ADVENTURE OF IT

Today HiQ is launching a blog called “Coffee Break at HiQ”. The blog is being run by HiQ’s consultants and will delve deep into the topic of IT.

The blog is being launched today and replaces the former and popular blog called “HiQ-blogger”. “Coffee Break at HiQ” will be run by HiQ’s consultants and will focus more on the things the consultants work with.

“The blog is called ‘Coffee Break at HiQ’ because we want it to be like an interesting discussion during a coffee break. We’re good at a lot of different things here at HiQ and we’re eager to share our knowledge,” says Manne Fagerlind, one of the blog’s initiators.

The blog entries will come from some of HiQ’s body of almost 1,300 IT and management consultants in Sweden, Finland, Denmark and Russia. Blog entries about Scala, management and usability have already been posted.

“The new blog is a good way to show people what we can do at HiQ. We’re working in an incredibly exciting sector that’s constantly developing. Much of what we work with today didn’t exist five years ago. We want to show people that working with IT is a great adventure,” says Lars Stugemo, President and CEO of HiQ.
